The Irishman-By an Irishman. There was a lady lived at Leith. A lady very stylish, man, And yet in spite of her teeth, She fell in love with an Lishman— A nasty, ugly Irishman, A wild, tremendous Irishmantearing, swaring, thumping, bumping, roaring Irishman.

His face was no ways beautiful. For with small pox 'twas scarred across ; And the shoulders of the ugly dog Were almost double a yard across O, the lump of an Irishman, The whiskey-devouring Irishman-The great he rogue, with his wonderful brogue, the fighting, rioting Irishman.

One of his eyes was bottle green. And the other eye was out, my dear : And the calves of his wicked looking legs Were more than two feet about, my dear. O, the great big Irishman, The rattling battling Irishman-The stamping, ramping, swaggering, staggering, leathering, swash of an Irishman.

He took so much of Lundy Foot That he used to snort and snuffle, O: And in shape and size the fellow's neck Was as bad as the neck of a Buffalo, (), the horrible Irishman, The thundering, blundering Irishman-The slashing, dashing, smashing, lashing, thrashing hashing Irishman,

His name was a terrible name, indeed, Being Timothy Thady Mulligan: And whenever he emptied his tumbler of punch. He'd not rest till he filled it full again. The boozing, brushing, Irishman, The 'toxicated Irishmanhe whiskey, frisky, rummy, gummy, brand no dandy Irishman

This was the lad the lady loved, Like all the girls of quality; And he broke the skulls of the men of Leith, Just by the way of jollity, O, the leathering Irishman The barbarous, savage Irishmanthe hearts of the maids, and the gentlemen's heads, were bothered, I'm sure, by this Irishman.

Pete Whetstone and the Mall Boy. Pete Whetstone, of Arkansas, was once traveling horse-back through the interior of the State, and elled one evening to stay all night at a little log longe near the road, where entertainment and a nost office were kept. Two other strangers were here, and the mail rider rode up about dark. Supner heing over, the mail carrier and the three genlamen were invited into a small room furnished with a good fire and two beds, which were to accommodate four persons for the night. The mail carwas a little shabby, dirty, lousy-looking wretch, with whom none of the gentlemen liked the idea of deeping. Pete Whetstone eyed him closely as he

"Where do you sleep to-night, my lad ?" "I'll thleep with you, I reckon," lisped the youth, or with one o' them other fellers, I don't care

The other two gentlemen took the hint and ocspied one of the beds together immediately, leavthe other bed and the confab to be enjoyed by and the mail boy together as best they could. ste and the mail boy both commenced hauling off heir duds, and Pete getting in bed first, and wishere with me, for the disease is catching."

Just as the services were shout to commence, a good sized dog was observed to be sauntering about the aisles, probably in search his master. After making a pretty thorough examination of the aisles, he ascended to the pulpit, passing up the stairs on one side, and down on the other But not having attained the object of his warch, or satisfied his curiosity, he again ascended the stairs, and took the same route, but with no better success. Again he ascended the steps, but instead of passing through the pulpit, he took a poation on the upper step, where, settling himself upm his haunches, he deliberately surveyed the congregation for some minutes, during which time a pause ensued, in which it seemd doubtful whether
